

Appia Communications to Offer IT and Telecom Services in Atlanta

TRAVERSE CITY, Michigan — May 18, 2007 — Appia Communications, a leading provider of managed IT and telecommunications services to small and mid-sized companies and organizations, announced that it is expanding its service footprint to Atlanta and surrounding markets.

"Atlanta is a dynamic market, and we're eager to serve the business and non-profit community here," said Victor von Schlegell, Appia's president, "We're looking forward to bringing the same benefits of IP technology to customers in Atlanta that we have brought to customers in other U.S. markets."

Managed services offer several advantages. Rather than dealing with multiple vendors for phone, Internet access, network security, PC and server support, and other services, Appia customers deal with one company—and receive one invoice—for all of these services. Customers using Appia's services also can experience monthly cost savings of 30% or more while gaining access to features and functions that were not available before moving to Appia.

Appia has also announced a partnership agreement with Cpak Technology Solutions in LaGrange, Georgia. "We are pleased that Cpak Technology Solutions will be working with Appia and providing a sales and support presence in the Atlanta area," said Jason Ulm, Appia's Vice President of Sales. "Cpak is a respected company and we are honored that they have chosen to work with us."
