

Appia MPLS Promotion Extended | New customers with three or more locations can save over $4,000 a year!

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. - November 29, 2010 - Appia Communications, a leading provider of managed communications and network services, today announced that its special MPLS offer has been extended until December 31, 2010. The offer waives MPLS port charges and reduces access pricing; this can add up to a $4,000 per year savings for three sites.

"This promotion is perfect if you need a high-quality, managed network for voice, video, and data," explained Jason Ulm, vice president of channel sales at Appia Communications. "Our partners can offer customers a measurable advantage versus other MPLS providers. Companies can have the benefits of MPLS with costs similar to a simple IP network."

A minimum of three sites at three separate locations is required to qualify for this promotion.

MPLS (Multi Protocol Label Switching) helps multi-site companies and organizations manage their branch-to-branch and remote connections. MPLS prioritizes time-sensitive applications such as hosted VoIP, SIP trunking and video conferencing, so that they take precedence over traffic like email and internet browsing, all across a single connection.
